

Ollie Gingersnap

Wears a black hoodie for his torso while also keeping the hood up as he thinks it makes him look more mysterious and cool. Follows up on this by wearing blue sweatpants to go along with the hoodie as well as thinking that a black and blue theme makes him intimidating. Hair color is brown which matches the typical element that Ollie wields, which is earth.

His typical job is construction, which is fitting given his earth element, however off work he goofs off with his terraforming by creating new ramps with them to trick off. His friends are also fellow skateboarders who tend to be outcasts for being seen as jerks, however those in the inner friend group know that they are some of the most loyal friends imaginable.

The things he would say would probably be best described as 1970's culture as this type of culture he and his friends grew up with thanks to a Disco loving brother. Some of the sentences would be normal things people say but with words such as "Snake" meaning traitor, "Sketchy" meaning bad looking, or his favorite, a "Hill Bomb" which means to go fast down a hill.

"I love my best friend, but his girl is such a snake..."

"I wouldn't go for that bro, that looks like a sketchy situation..."

"This ramp isn't nearly good enough for a Hill Bomb, but I can fix it"

Eddy Dorian

Wears a diving suit since he tends to work salvaging things in the sea, either to sell or to clean the ocean, however outside of work he wears a three piece suit he earned by selling deep sea treasures. He has blonde hair, which is the color of gold dubloon coins, which is fitting for someone who searches for treasure in the ocean.

His job is a deep sea diver where he tends to clean the ocean and uses his sound magic to find hard to discover things that were lost to even the most trained eyes in the sea. He originally wanted to go into music but because of job competition, he decided to try to apply his talents somewhere else, he mainly picked deep sea diving to save a precious item belonging to his girlfriend, who is now his wife.

He tends to be more silent since as a sound mage, it's very easy for his sound based magic to go off accidentally, but he tends to be more polite with his language and very eloquent with his words. He loves history in general and looks into the past thanks to his appreciation for old treasures as he grew to love diving.

"Please let my words be as delicate as the gentle stream of a peaceful river, and as profound as the epics of the long past."

"In the embrace of the kingdom of Neptune, I must be careful because one wrong move could make me join their history."

"Behold the aquatic pageantry, a beautiful sight that is only beaten out by my wife."

Danny Genlai

Wears a wine colored shirt because wine is fruit mixed with alcohol and alcohol tends to help numb pain from injuries, which is what martial artists can receive from intense training, also wears orange pants because orange is the color of confidence, which is something necessary for a martial artist who must not allow his opponent any type of ground gained, physically or mentally.

His job includes being an urban planner and uses his strength to help move obstacles out of the way in order to plan out things needed to construct objects or places. However as a martial artist, he also makes a great planner in and out of combat as he can directly think what is the best course of action and plan accordingly.

He is fully confident, his language yells out confidence entirely through his words and expressions. He rarely has any doubts and uses language with confidence to help less confident people.

"This battle is already won before you throw your punch."

"I know moving the obstacle here would be best."

"We all will make it through such a simple trial."

Emma Cogni

Wears a green colored dress as green is the color of revitalization and life, which is fitting for a nature mage who can control animals and plants. The silver necklace is also worn as a deterrent against monsters and destructive beings which is fitting since such beings wouldn't be a part of nature, but rather in a different category altogether, lastly her blonde hair is fitting as yellow is the color of growth and warmth, which is something a therapist would need to help her clients.

Her job is therapy, she helps people with her nature magic as well as with her words, as even though she can heal the wounds of the flesh, the wounds of the mind still can remain. One of the things she likes to do as a therapist is use her nature magic to summon a therapy dog for people who really need one, as well as use aromatherapy to help set a relaxing situation for the client.

She is motherly, she dotes on people she loves and because of this attitude, she felt it was obvious to go into therapy so that she can help people as best as she can. She tends to be a sweet mother with how she speaks and hardly has a bad thing to say about people, but when she needs to be harsh, she will be in order to help who she needs to.

"As a healer of hearts, my words are akin to the caress of a gentle breeze, but when storms of adversity rage against you, I will stand firm, an unwavering oak in the tempest."

"My child, let the roots of this session burrow deep, anchoring you to the nurturing soil of compassion as we navigate the seasons of your soul."

"In the sacred groves of introspection, may you find sanctuary. Speak, and let the language of leaves translate your sorrows into a healing hymn."

Cree Derly

Wears a very orderly fashion which includes a gray dress which is the epitome of order and function while also being a bit pretty, while also having a black haircut that is completely symmetrical as this mage is dedicated to order and that would extend to her fashion.

Her job is coding for sites to make sure they function while also updating them, and also coding for different programs to make sure that they become a working product that the consumer would buy. Thanks to her order magic, she is able to find errors with them quickly and fix them, and as an order mage she casts spells that forces everyone to follow specific rules.

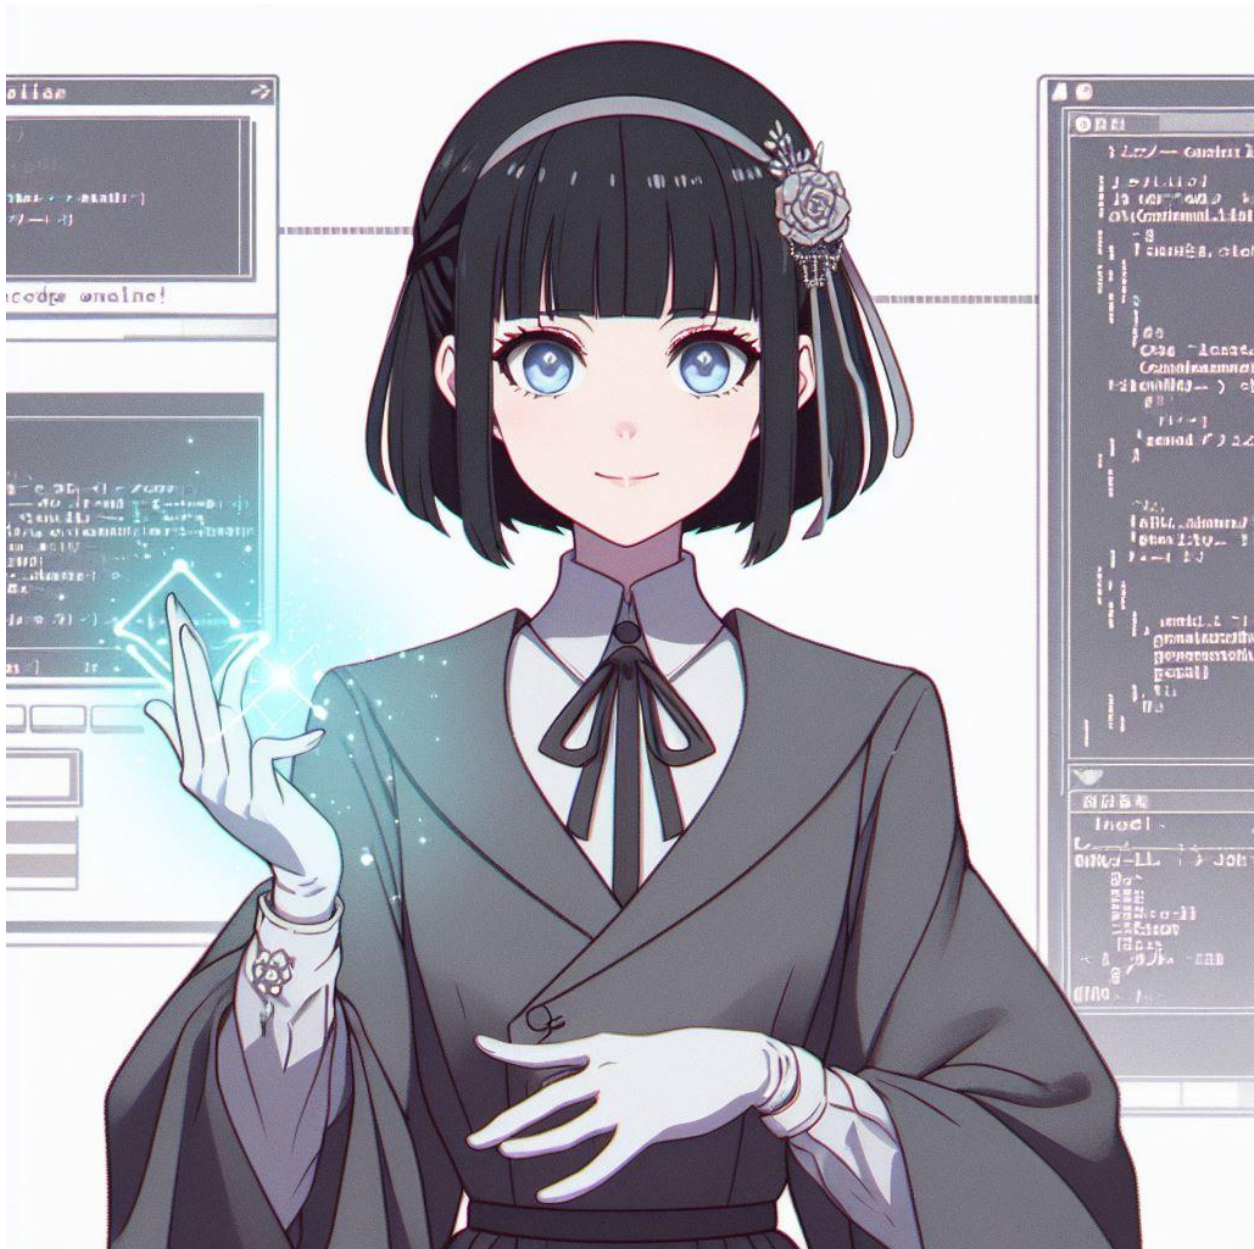

Cree has a very odd way of speaking, as she speaks with authority, but the authority is not her own, but rather from the universe itself. She tends to speak about how the rules of the universe must be followed or else things will start to break down entirely when chaos takes over.

"Behold, for I am the conduit through which the universe speaks. Its decrees are immutable, and adherence to its cosmic principles is the bedrock upon which stability is erected."

"The authority in my voice is but a reflection of the cosmic imperative. The universe demands order, and my words carry the weight of celestial consequence."

"The universe articulates its will through my voice. Its laws are not negotiable, and to defy them is to court the dissolution of the cosmic contract that binds reality."

Oberon Nightglider

A half fairy half human male who tends to wear fancy suits as he is a deal maker of all sorts, and someone who makes deals of all kinds needs to look very presentable, has a green color suit as green is associated with cash and prosperity. Has purple pants and a purple fedora as purple is the color of mystery, royalty and fantasy, which highlight his fairy powers and abilities.

He works as a deal broker or loan shark, he tends to be familiar with making deals either way and makes deals involving desperate people who need a problem fixed either financially or by other means, he works with his fairy minions to solve the problems, but tends to either get paid back in full or with a big favor is his choosing.

He is completely about business, however he tends to be very weasel like in words, with him tending to say things that make you less confident, his favorite words tend to include "Could", "Maybe", or "Doubt" as it allows him free reign to say he was on your side until he isn't. Basically he is the definition of a fair weather ally.

"This battle could end well for us, I don't think we need to worry."

"That deal maybe the best deal for you, but you'll have to play it out to know for sure."

"I don't think you should take your friend's deal, my deal sounds like a much better play."

Manual Viewfinder

His fashion includes three colors completely, which are Red, Orange, and Yellow. He has red hair that is spiked up in a flame which is fitting since he is a dedicated fire mage. He wears a yellow shirt and an orange vest and pants while also having flame patterns on his clothes.

A passionate cameraman who loves his job and loves to record and archive things to video, his job is mainly to record footage of all types, which includes weddings, movies, detective work rarely, but he still records to preserves memories as he knows that memories are important to keep as like a flame, they are there one minute but can easily be gone the next.

While most fire mages have a reputation of being impulsive and hot headed, in order to be good with camera work you must be calm and collected to collect footage needed. Off work he is also very relaxed and chill and tends to have a more mellow personality which is opposite from his straight faced attitude when recording shots.

"Precision is the lens through which I capture moments, ensuring each frame is a deliberate brushstroke in the canvas of storytelling."

"Ahhhhhh, nothing like a good soda to perk me up after a hard day at work..."

"Let's not cause a fuss about touchy subjects now, I don't want to lose friends after all hahaha"

Garda Sureshot

A formidable technomancer who boasts a practical style, often donning attire such as a security officer's outfit and a security vest with brown that allows her to blend into her surroundings which compliments her long brown hair. In contrast to her practical fashion, when needing to guard something, she wields metal gauntlet arms that enhance her strength and can shoot energy blasts using her technomancy, also wields two giant metal arms that wield their own weapons as well.

She was born into a family of snipers however, she had a very nasty habit of her arms shivering so she wasn't able to do any sniping, however she didn't let that stop her and proceeded to craft herself home made gauntlet arms and mecha arms to help her with weaponry, she tends to work with protection around places she is hired for.

Her voice is stern and cuts to the chase fast, however when on a team, she can bark orders fast. She tends to speak a bit robotically but that is easily explained by her needing to communicate with her machines sometimes. Off duty is also very similar which tends to cut to the chase as she prefers the conversation to move along without any roadblocks.

"Machine Arm 1, prepare to fire."

"Intruder you have one option, leave now. If you do not comply, you will leave in an ambulance."

"Cut to the chase, what is the situation about."

Acade Studia

An enigma of an ice mage who navigates the halls of her college campus with an aura around her that literally freezes the ground she walks, as a result she tends to wear winter clothes such as jackets, hoodies, long sleeve shirts, and other sorts of warming clothes. She also is a bit geeky and tends to wear shirts about bands she likes. Ice mages are known for being associated with blue, but her hair is actually a dark black, which fits with the ice motif as Ice is the element of loneliness.

She also comes from a more humble background where instead of being from a long line of mages, she actually was lucky enough to be born with such a gift of ice. This gift made her want to research it more and studies constantly to control it, which is technically her job as she wants to control her gift before she causes unintentional harm to people.

As a woman who stays near the library she sits alone even though she wishes for people to be her friend, her cold aura forces people away, which made her more shy and desperate for attention, and is easily seen in her dialogue, which has her stuttering and not at all experienced with talking with people at all.

“Hello, m-m-my n-name is Aca-Ac-Acade Studio, I MEAN STUDIA!”

“I cannot control my po-powers, it is really a b-b-bother...”

“My powers might be cold, b-but my heart is burning to sp-speak with someone...”

Acedegomo (Real Name Lost)

A fallen man who could best be described as, poisoned with chaos, as nothing about him is done with any rhyme or reason anymore as chaos forces his body to follow its will. He was a cowboy, and these are the clothes he most commonly is seen with, however the hues on them change constantly such as from red to black to white to green, and the same can be said about his hair as it also changes constantly.

His job is basically to spread chaos wherever he goes for reasons nobody knows yet, either by with language or by causing events to turn into chaos, he has the ability to infect someone with chaos itself which basically makes the laws of nature not apply to something, for example him touching a stone could cause the stone to float in midair sporadically, or it can cause the stone to turn into a cooked lobster and a giraffe, or it can turn the rock into a human who has his own backstory, and sometimes the rock will just not turn at all.

Since language requires an order of words, its obvious what he says would be incomprehensible at best to humans, for a best explanation, he could be speaking "Hello how are you?" through his mind, but to everyone else he will sound like he's making crocodile noises in one second, a jet engine the next, and lastly a clip from a music video the next.

